

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 404

After hanging up the call, Andrius immediately called Rosalie.

Rosalie picked it up almost immediately, "Young Master Quirke, did the medicinal materials business already set the time?"

Andrius answered with a smile, "They hope to have a detailed discussion with you in two days, but it still depends on your time. Are you free in two days?"

The biggest issue with the research institute no was the medicinal materials supply. Knowing that the medicinal materials business had set a time, Rosalie naturally prioritized them and agreed without hesitation, "I have no problems, please inform them that I will be there on time."

Andrius said again, "You don't need to prepare anything, someone will pick you up when you get there."

Rosalie affirmed and thanked him again. "I'm sorry to bother you about this, Young Master Quirke."

Andrius smiled. "It's only right of me. I troubled you greatly when you were treating my grandfather."

Besides, he also had to help Rosalie and Byron's relationship.

Having said that, Andrius did not forget to talk his brother up. He casually mentioned Byron, "Besides, Byron called me just now to press me, even saying that I should take this more seriously!"

Hearing this, Rosalie suddenly fell silent as she recalled what happened last night.

Byron was still concerned about the matter with her research institute today based on what Andrius said.

She had already made it clear to him yesterday, even made it clear that this matter had Melody's hands all over it. Just what was Byron thinking...

Seeing that she did not respond after a long time, Andrius knew that it had once again been uncalled for. He cleared his throat with embarrassment and said, "I have conveyed to them the matter and will wait for your good news in two days."

Rosalie pursed her lips and smiled, "If I can successfully sign the contract, I will come right up to your door to thank you when I come back."

After exchanging a few more pleasantries, they hung up the phone.

Thinking of Rosalie's attitude when he mentioned Byron just now, Andrius was confused.

He had already arranged everything to reach that stage last night, having created such a perfect world just for the two of them, why did Rosalie's attitude toward Byron seem to be unchanged?

Just what happened to them after he left yesterday?

There was basically nothing for her to do in the research institute recently since the one important matter was to secure a medicinal material supplier.

With Andrius's news, Rosalie was relieved.

Shortly after hanging up the call, Andrius sent her the information on the few medical material businesses in s City.

Rosalie asked Yves to come and study them with her for the day and to settle the partnership proposal.

What remained was to s city and to discuss it with them.

When Rosalie got home that evening, her expression was much more relaxed than the last two days.

Seeing their mommy's appearance, the two boys looked worried, however.

During dinner, Nox poked at the rice on his plate absentmindedly, and asked unhappily, "Mommy, is the issue with the research institute coming to an end?"

Rosalie nodded noncommittally. "Mommy will go to s City in two days. If everything goes well, the matter maybe resolved."

In other words, they would be going abroad soon.

The boys looked at each other and their faces fell. "Do we have to go abroad?"

Rosalie did not answer them, which defaulted as an affirmative.

Of course, she knew that the boys were reluctant to part with Estie. she was reluctant to part with the little girl too.

However, thinking of how Byron had pressed her last night, Rosalie felt frightened again. If she continued to remain, who knew what would happen next...
