

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 400

The following evening, Rosalie wanted to get off work early to pick up the boys from school.

She had not picked up the boys for a long time because she had to hide from Byron. Now that meeting him was unavoidable, there was no need for Rosalie to hide anymore.

As Rosalie thought of this, she called Nanny Lisa to stay put and told her that she would pick the boys up herself.

Lisa agreed immediately.

Rosalie hung up and threw herself into work.

The Lancer family's research institute was still in the preliminary stage, but there were many details to be finalized with her research institute. In addition, Rosalie did not want to disappoint the Lancer family, hence the preparation must be complete.

After Yves was done checking the experimental area, he came to give Rosalie the daily report. As soon as he entered the door and saw that she was working attentively, he sat down quietly across from her and waited for her to finish.

An unknown amount of time passed. Rosalie looked away from the screen. When she saw the person opposite her, she was stunned for a moment. "Dr. Graham, why are you here? When did you come?"

Yves smiled. "Not too long. I saw that you were working, so I didn't want to bother you."

Rosalie nodded slightly. "Oh, what's the matter? How is it going in the experimental area?"

Yves said, "That is exactly what I wanted to tell you about. The project has been going very smoothly in the past two days, so you can feel at ease and focus on preparing for the cooperation with the Lancer family."

After speaking, Yves beamed with appreciation. "Everyone in the research institute is excited about this cooperation. They have great expectations. Thank you very much for obtaining this opportunity."

Rosalie had gotten up to pour him a cup of tea. When she heard this, she smiled humbly. "Everyone in the institute is responsible for obtaining this cooperation. After all, the institute is supported by everyone. No matter how good I am, the Lancer family wouldn't have chosen to cooperate with our institute for my sake."

Rosalie knew the Lancer family must have done a lot of research on their research institute before they decided to cooperate with them.

Yves took the glass of water and thanked her politely. Then, he asked about the progress of her preparations, "How's the preparation for the cooperation?"

Rosalie generously turned the computer screen over and let him see it himself.

Although the details of the cooperation had been finalized, the Lancer family's research institute was not yet on the right track. These past two days, Rosalie was making preparations by checking the information based on the research direction of the Lancer family.

Yves read for a while, then frowned slightly. "These are all areas that our institute hasn't explored before. I wonder if we can satisfy the Lancer family."

Rosalie pursed her lips and smiled. "That's why we must prepare as much as possible, and if the cooperation goes smoothly, the scope of our research institute will also expand. It'll be beneficial to the future development of the research institute."

Yves nodded thoughtfully, "Understood, I'll get everyone to make some preparations."

While the two were discussing cooperation with the Lancer family, there was a sudden knock on the door.

Rosalie opened the door only to see a researcher wearing a lab coat standing at the door.

When he saw her, the man's face was a little embarrassed. "Dr. Jacobs, it's almost time to get off work. I'm sorry to bother you, but there's something wrong with our experiment. Can you help US check it out?"

Rosalie agreed without hesitation.

Yves also stopped and went to the experimental area with them.