

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 418

when bandaging his wound, Rosalie could clearly feel the man's gaze on her substantively.

Rosalie could not figure out the meaning in them.

She wondered if he was thinking about what happened last night...

Thinking of what happened the night before, Rosalie could not help but think of the bottle of red wine that was only left with one-third of its contents and she felt complicated again. Her dressing of Byron's wound was a bit rough.

"Is it done?" Byron asked with confusion after seeing her having no other actions despite waiting for a long time.

Rosalie suddenly came back to her senses and nodded calmly. "Almost."

Hearing this, Byron looked down at the gauze in his hand. He raised a brow and said meaningfully, "Miss Jacob's medical skills are also dependent on the person?"

Rosalie could not help but be stunned for a moment. She followed his gaze, only to see that the bandaging he was sporting was indeed a bit ugly.

For a moment, Rosalie's face turned uncontrollably red. She opened her mouth but could not explain herself.

Fortunately, the man was only joking and did not push it further. "It's almost time, let's go and see where they want to play."

Rosalie heaved a sigh of relief. She got up and walked over to the children. Seeing that the little children were still pointing at the guide, it was obvious that they had not reached a unanimous opinion.

"Have you guys decided yet? Do you want me to give you some suggestions?"

Rosalie spoke softly.

The children were deep in their discussion and when they heard her voice, they realized she had already come over here. They were immediately concerned about Byron's injury. "Auntie, how is daddy's injury?"

Rosalie thought of the mess that were her bandages. She abruptly smiled and placated as if nothing happened, "It's just a small injury, I've already bandaged it."

The children looked at Byron who was not far away with concern.

Byron nodded to them slightly.

Seeing this, the children were relieved and talked to Rosalie about their disagreements.

Estie saw that they could go out to sea and see dolphins in the guide and wanted to experience that.

However, after what happened just now, the two boys were afraid that going to sea would be dangerous, so they proposed to go seashell picking and then to the handicraft workshop to make some handicraft.

The children could not settle their dispute and were discussing other plans.

Hearing the children's differing opinions, Rosalie could not help but hesitate.

Technically, there were not any differences in where the little guys wanted to go. They could go to the sea first and then come back to do handicraft.

However, she had the same concerns as Lucian and Nox. She was afraid that going to sea would be dangerous.

After all, Estie was so important to Byron, and she would not be able to bear this responsibility.

Thinking of this, Rosalie turned around and looked at Byron, asking for his opinion.

Byron naturally also heard what the children said and met with Rosalie's gaze. The man walked up to them and touched their heads, saying in a deep voice, "

Since you each have your own ideas, then let's go for all of them."

Hearing this, Lucian and Nox looked at him hesitantly. "But if we go to the sea... would Estie be in danger?"

Byron knew that the boys had gotten frightened by what happened just now. His brows furrowed as he comforted them, "There will be no danger, you all just need to sit on the yacht. I will be at the side, protecting you. There will also be a staff member then. II

The children looked at each other with doubt.

They also wanted to go to the sea. It was the first time they had the opportunity to go out to sea at their age.

However, the boys refused after considering Estie's safety.

Now that daddy had said this, they had no choice but to agree.