

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 479

After a while, the little ones strolled down the stairs.

The little ones feared their mommy would notice their injuries and changed into long-sleeved pajamas.

Rosalie was already sitting at the table. She watched the little ones approaching her when suddenly she noticed that something seemed wrong.

After staring at Nox for a long time, Rosalie frowned and asked, "Nox, what happened to your hand?"

The little one's palm had a visible scratch wound.

Hearing his Mommy's question, Nox froze and looked at his palm when he saw Rosalie looking at it.

Noticing the injury, Nox subconsciously looked at Lucian.

Lucian frowned.

Nox must have gotten a scratch on his palm when the guys threw them on the ground.

However, he never expected Nox's injury to be in such a visible area.

Rosalie soon realized something was wrong. "Lisa said you slept all day. Did you sneak out?"

She knew her little ones better than anyone.

Besides that possibility, Rosalie could not think why the two boys would sleep in their room all day.

Lisa looked at the two little ones, shocked. "No way... Why didn't I know that they went out?"

She had been working on the ground floor. If the little ones had slipped out, she would have seen them.

The little ones lowered their heads, feeling too guilty to defend themselves.

Rosalie knew her guess was close.

"Come here."

She gave them a serious look and stretched her hand to the little ones.

The little ones looked at each other and approached her.

Rosalie rolled up the sleeves of the two little boys and saw the bruises on their elbows.

The injuries on their arms were much worse than the wound on Nox's hand.

The two little ones were severely injured, yet they did not say anything about it.

Rosalie looked at their wounds and at her sons, who were feeling guilty. Tears welled up in her eyes.

‘What the hell is going on? How did you get hurt so badly?’

With that, Rosalie pulled up the little guys’ trousers and checked if they had any other injuries.

As expected, the little ones also had scratches on their knees. However, they were much lighter than those on their arms.

Lucian did not want to worry their mommy and only said, “We accidentally fell.”

Nox nodded.

Rosalie’s expression changed. “Where did you fall?”

The two little ones thought for a long time and guiltily said, “Erm... We fell when we were climbing Estie’s house fence.”

When Rosalie heard this excuse, she froze. “I’m a doctor, and I know you can’t get hurt like this from falling from a high place.”

The little ones looked at each other guiltily when their mommy caught them lying so easily. However, they still did not dare to confess that a group of guys had almost beaten them up.

Their mommy was pissed off enough that they had sneaked out looking for Estelle.

She was going to be worried if she found out they almost got beat up by those guys.

“Do you think I won’t be worried if you don’t tell me the truth?”

Rosalie frowned as she looked at the little ones.

She had always kept her little ones well-protected as they were growing up.

Rosalie had never let them suffer any injuries, much less severe ones.

However, this time, the little ones got hurt without her knowing about it...

The boys subconsciously looked up at their mommy.

All they saw was their mommy’s teary eyes. She looked like she was about to cry at any second.