

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 605

Thinking of this, Andrius could not help but ask, "What did you write?"

Byron, on the other hand, had no plans to talk about this in detail. After all, the woman did not mention the card at all.

Even when he had taken the initiative to ask questions, the woman had immediately ignored him.

He wondered if the woman had even seen the card!

After thinking about it, how could she be sure that he had sent the flowers if she had not seen the card?

Thinking of this, Byron was also skeptical.

Since the woman had called him, she must have seen the card, but was unwilling to mention it to him.

Could it be that there was really something wrong with what he had written in the card?

Andrius waited for a long time at the side and could not help pressing him, "What did you write? If you don't say it, I won't know what the problem is."

Byron then frowned and revealed what he had written.

Hearing the five words he wrote, Andrius could not help but cradle his forehead. "Be honest with each other. Rather than write that, you would have been better off writing your intentions directly. Isn't Miss Jacobs still required to guess things by herself with this? H

In order for Rosalie to be frank, he must first be frank!

Byron glanced at them and added in a deep voice, "She called me after receiving the flower, and I did as you said."

Andrius's expectations for his brother rekindled in his heart. "How did you do it? Did you confess directly?"

Byron thought about the content of their call and nodded noncommittally.

Andrius found this interesting, "what did you say?"

Byron replied, "I asked her if she would like to come back to me again."

"What did Dr. Jacobs say?" Andrius asked anxiously.

There was silence in the car for a few seconds after he asked that before Byron's voice sounded, "she didn't say anything."

She did not say anything...

Andrius pondered for a few seconds before he smiled and reassured, "That she said nothing instead of refusing..." was much better.

Before he could say the last few words, he heard Byron speak again.

"Then I added that Estelle is lacking a mother, and that it just so happens that she likes Estelle very much..."

Hearing this, Andrius's voice abruptly stopped, and he did not know what to say for a while.

He did not expect Byron to be this direct when he had suggested to him to confess directly.

Moreover, although he had known that Byron would often use Estie to make Rosalie compromise, he did not think that he would bring up the girl at such a time.

Was he chasing Rosalie, or Estie?

"What did I do wrong?" Byron asked him, his expression ugly. "Could it be that your method not work at all?"

Hearing Byron question himself, Andrius could not help but cradle his forehead, "Byron, you don't court someone like this, this is also not how you confess."

Byron's brows furrowed slightly, and confusion filled him.

"You always bring Estie up. One would have thought that you were threatening Dr. Jacobs if they didn't know!" Andrius explained.

The creases between Byron's brows deepened. "Then, what should I do?"

Andrius corrected him reluctantly, "When courting a woman, you need to be softer. You have to remember that you are pursuing Dr. Jacobs, and it has nothing to do with Estie. If you say that, Dr.

Jacobs may think that you gave her flowers just because you were looking for a mother for Estie. She wouldn't know what you're thinking let alone agree to reconcile with you."

Byron listened to him carefully and the more he listened, the more his head hurt.

He had never pursued anyone and did not know pursuing someone was actually such a complicated thing.

They even had to be particular with what they said... 1

