

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 606

“Do you understand what I am saying?”

Andrius asked him just in case.

Byron’s brow furrowed.

Hearing him say so much, in all honesty he did take them all in, but he was still confused about what he should do.

After what happened today, he really did not want to go wrong with this.

Hence, even though it was shameful, Byron could only steel himself and ask, “To put it simply, what should I say to her so that she can understand what I mean?”

Andrius, “...”

Had he not been clear enough?

“I like you.”

Andrius said to his brother solemnly.

There was silence after he said that.

His expression was just way too serious that even Byron could not help but be stunned for a few seconds.

Seeing his expression, Andrius knew that his teachings were paying off and his expression changed. He continued to admonish him in an earnest and maternal manner, “Do you know how to say these three words?”

Byron came back to his senses and nodded.

“I understand that you’ve never courted anyone despite your age so it’s fine to take a detour.”

Andrius said earnestly, “However, courting someone is just like doing business, you don’t need to go round in circles. You have to tell the other person your intentions directly so that they will understand, otherwise, no business can be done if you’re always so secretive.”

Andrius patted Byron’s shoulder as he said that. “If you like her, you like her. Don’t keep bringing up Estelle and using her as a shield. If you keep doing this, considering Dr. Jacobs’ temperament, I can say for sure that her love for Estelle will also turn into vigilance over time. By then, neither of you should even think about getting close to Dr. Jacobs. You deserve it, but Estelle? Estelle is innocent!”

Byron’s brows furrowed slightly when he heard the last sentence and the pressure around him abruptly dropped by a little.

Andrius shuddered. He realized what he had said, and laughed, " It's just an example, you should get what I mean."

Byron stared in silence for a long time.

Andrius was indeed not wrong.

They did not even need to wait long as the woman had already started avoiding Estelle because of him.

The little girl was also furious with him for this.

Byron, however, never took the warning.

It was only because that woman would blindly avoid him if he did not bring up Estie.

He really had no other choice!

Andrius drank his wine guiltily. He looked at Byron's face carefully.

He only saw Byron's expression becoming more and more solemn.

Just when Andrius thought it was because he said something wrong and was regretting it, he heard a deep and sullen voice.

"She keeps avoiding me, what can I do?"

His emotions before that were anger for himself went away.

Andrius let out a sigh of relief and continued to advise him," Regardless, you did hurt Dr. Jacobs six years ago. It's normal for her to avoid you. If you really want her to come back, go in front of her and stop acting all high and mighty. Humble yourself and grovel or something."

Byron turned and looked at him, and the anger in his eyes flashed, as if he was questioning Andrius, how dare he let him sell miserably.

Andrius was shocked and explained: "Dr. Jacobs has been practicing medicine for so many years and must have strong empathy. Besides, you are usually so strong, and if you grovel, Dr. Jacobs will more or less be somewhat soft-hearted."
