Chapter 61 The Nonspeaker Can Talk

Seeing his daughter's appearance, Byron frowned slightly. There was nothing more to say. Over the years, it was widely spread that the little princess of the Lawrence family was a nonspeaker.

Byron had never offered an explanation to the outside world either. Estie had never been a nonspeaker and had even begun talking much earlier than ordinary children.

However, she later suffered from autism. Eventually, she was no longer willing to speak. She would use paper and pen to convey her ideas. Even in front of him, she was unwilling to speak. For a long time, although Byron was helpless, he could only slowly accept this. In his heart, he still hoped that his little girl could live a normal life. The two boys had mentioned that Estie had no friends in kindergarten just now. It was likely that it was related to her reluctance to speak...

II

The journey was silent. When they reached the manor, Estie just walked to the front gloomily. Byron slowed his steps behind her. One after another, they entered the villa. "You're finally back!" Byron heard his mother's voice the moment they went in. He looked up and around the living room in astonishment. He saw his parents and Wendy surrounding Estie with faces full of joy.

Chapter 62 Urging You To Get Married "Dad, Mom, why are you here?" Byron frowned as he asked.

Hearing this, Mrs. Lawrence, Melody, who had been worriedly checking if her little granddaughter was injured, rebuked, "I heard that my sweetheart went missing early in the morning. Shouldn't I be worried? I was so scared that I quickly pulled your father to come over here to have a look. Also, how could you not have told us about something so huge?!" Byron was speechless. "Estie, tell me, where did you run off to?" Melody had confirmed that she was not hurt before pulling her into her arms affectionately. "How could you run off on your own when you're still so young? You scared me. You can't do this in the future, okay?" she said with concern.

Wendy also added, "If there's anything you're unhappy about, you can come and tell me. Don't run away without a word. Your grandparents were worried about you. I was also ready to head out and search for you. Fortunately, you're back!"

Estie, who was being held in her grandmother's arms, showed a cold expression when she heard this. She gave no response.

Byron knew that the little girl did not like this kind of atmosphere. He walked forward as if nothing had happened and took her from his mother's arms. He calmly said, "She's very smart. She didn't run too far, so you don't have to worry."

Estie hugged her daddy's neck and buried her head into his shoulder.

Melody looked at her little granddaughter and felt distressed. She turned to her son and complained, "I think it's because you've been neglecting Estie from working all day. If you get married sooner, you'll have someone to take care of her. Estie won't be so lonely. She won't be thinking about running away from home all day!" Hearing this, Byron frowned slightly. He was able to tell that his mother was going to urge him to get married again, so he immediately promised, "I'll try not to go out on weekends and stay at home with her in the future. I didn't plan to go out today, but there was an emergency in the company and I had to go."

Melody did not manage to achieve her goal, so she simply went straight to the point, "Don't act stupid with me. When are you going to settle your marriage with Wendy? Wendy has been with you for six years. A woman doesn't have that much time. Don't you feel bad for her?"

Wendy, who was at the side, was holding onto Melody's arm thoughtfully with a shallow smile on her face. She was looking at Byron with some expectation in her eyes. In order to get a positive answer from Byron, she had specially gone to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence to press for the marriage.

She did not believe that Byron would still refuse her.

In the next second, however, Byron's answer once again shattered her anticipation. "Mom, I've been very busy recently. Not to mention, you've also seen the situation with Estie. Urging You To Get Married

She keeps running away from home recently, and her emotions are very unstable. I don't plan to think about marriage for the time being."

Melody frowned and exhorted with a maternal earnestness, "It's because of this that you need to hurry up and finalize your marriage. Wouldn't it be good if Wendy can help you take care of Estie with you? She has always treated Estie as her own over the years,"

"Mom!"

Byron cut Melody's words with a deep voice and said, "I've said it. I don't plan to consider it for the time being, and I'll be putting Estie's wishes first. Don't try to persuade me anymore!" Seeing Byron looking so obviously impatient, Wendy's expression changed slightly, but she hurriedly stepped in to mediate. "It's alright, I'm willing to wait. I'll wait till Estie accepts me completely." Hearing this, Melody was visibly moved. She patted Wendy's hand, her heart aching. She was such a good child, so affectionate and gentle. Unfortunately, her son was reluctant to marry her... Hearing the conversation between the adults, Estie frowned slightly. As if she wanted that bad woman to be her mommy!

Chapter 63 Don't Be With That Woman At noon, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence stayed at the manor for lunch. Wendy also found an excuse to stay.

Wendy behaved very considerately at the dining table. She served soup and vegetables to the elders from time to time. She had not forgotten to peel a shrimp for Estie. She herself took no more than a few bites.

"I remember that you like to eat shrimp, Estie, so I peeled them specially for you." Wendy pushed the peeled shrimp in front of Estie.

Estie just looked up before lowering her head back down to eat from her own plate as if she had not seen it. Wendy's hand was still on the plate, and the smile on her face was a little stiff. Estie did not touch the plate of shrimp after a long time. Melody asked strangely, "Estie, why aren't you eating the shrimp that Miss Wendy specially peeled for you? You should thank her." Estie ignored her and buried her head into her meal. Seeing this, Melody frowned slightly, and her tone became harsh. "Estie, your current behavior is very rude."

Estie paused and looked up, her eyes filled with stubbornness.

She just did not want to eat the things the bad lady gave her! Wendy saw Melody speaking up for her and hurriedly put on a thoughtful and sensible appearance. "Aunt Melody, don't be angry. Estie may be full, and that's why she's not eating it. Moreover, Estie is already in an unstable mood. You'll scare her like this," she comforted the old lady. Melody's tone was satisfied. "You're still the most sensible one. I'm relieved that you'll be around to take care of Estie in the future."

Wendy peeked at Byron carefully. The smile on her face was a little reluctant.

Melody also looked at her son, and there was a trace of accusation in her gaze.

Faced with both their gazes, Byron said to Wendy, "Estie doesn't eat what outsiders give her. You don't have to worry about it."

Hearing this, a look of hurt flashed past Wendy's face. She took back the plate of shrimp. Melody had intended to reconcile the relationship between these two. Seeing Wendy hurt, she turned to teach her son a lesson. "They're all flaws born from you spoiling her." Byron was noncommittal. "Children should have these kinds of awareness for safety. At least they won't simply eat things given to them by strangers when they go out." Melody wanted to say something more, but the patriarch of the Lawrence family, Benedict, who was at the side, coughed. "Byron is right. Estelle has been running around these two days. We can't afford her eating something she shouldn't have." At that, Melody gave up. Byron had work to deal with after lunch and asked the others what their plans were. Melody looked at her granddaughter lovingly. "I haven't brought Estie to go buy clothes for a long time. Estie, I'll bring you to buy a nice little dress!"

Although she was dissatisfied with her son's marriage matters, Melody really liked her granddaughter. Thinking about how her son was just a man at the end of the day, he would have inevitably neglected this aspect. Every time she saw Estie, she would take her out to buy a bunch of things that little girls liked.

Estie was about to agree to it when she saw Wendy walking over. "Aunt Melody, I'll go with you. I'd like to learn what Estie likes as well."

"Alright." Melody agreed with a smile. With that, she reached her hand out to hold Estie's hand but was met with emptiness. Estie shook her head at her grandma and wrote in the small notebook. [I don't want to go out today. I want to practice calligraphy at home.]

Melody did not force her either. Benedict held his granddaughter's hand and sat her down on the sofa. "Come, let me teach you. Tell me what words would you like to learn today." Estie thought of the names she saw on the brothers' notebooks when she was in kindergarten. She scribbled 'Nox' and 'Lucian' on the notebook.

Benedict wondered aloud, "Why do you suddenly want to practice these two words?" These two words were not commonly used words, after all. For a moment, he could not figure out any special significance.

Estie shook her head. She pulled her grandpa's sleeve and motioned for him to teach her.

Chapter 64 Pick Again, The Next One Will Be Better

It was very strange. They had obviously never seen how their mommy looked standing beside Daddy, yet they subconsciously felt that only Daddy was suited to stand by her side.

That was why... they should still keep their distance from Uncle Yves! "Thank you, Uncle Yves, but Mommy has an appointment tonight. I think we should call it a day," Lucian rejected politely. Yves looked at Rosalie with confusion.

She had not heard her mention having an appointment that night the entire day. Rosalie glanced at the boys. Although not knowing why they lied, she still followed their cue." I asked my best friend to join us for dinner in the evening. Another day, then." Yves smiled gently. "I've been so busy that I forgot to ask if you had any plans. In that case, I won't disturb you." With that, he bade the boys goodbye and turned to leave. Leaving the research institute, Rosalie frowned slightly and looked at the boys, puzzled. "Why did you lie just now? Don't you like Uncle Yves?" The two boys shook their heads solemnly. "We're keeping suitors away from Mommy!" Seeing their apparent seriousness, Rosalie was a little embarrassed. "No matter what it is, you can't just simply lie in the future." The little ones nodded their heads. Nox giggled as he went to her side. "We think Uncle Yves is really good, but you can have more picks. Don't worry, Brother and I don't need a daddy so soon anyway." Rosalie could not help but laugh. "Pick another one? Do you think there are so many fish in the sea?"

Chapter 65 She Has Some Consequences To Face Rosalie was not familiar with the restaurants nearby, so she specifically asked Mary to recommend one before taking the boys there directly. Andrius sent a message during dinner. (Dr. Jacobs, will you be administering treatment tonight?)

Rosalie then recalled that she had not explained the treatment process to him clearly and replied: [The old master is still a little weak, so the treatment can't be too frequent. He was treated two days in a row before, so let him rest for one day and I'll go over tomorrow. I apologize for forgetting to tell you.] (Alright, I'll be waiting for you anytime.) Andrius replied quickly. Seeing that their mommy was still sending messages while eating, the boys asked curiously, "Mommy, what's the matter?" Rosalie smiled and picked up some vegetables for them. "It's nothing. My patient from before is asking me if I'll be heading over."

Hearing this, the boys nodded sensibly. They each also gave their mommy some vegetables." Mommy is working hard, so she needs to eat more."

Seeing the two so sensible, Rosalie's heart softened a little.

Their meal was filled with joy.

After dinner, Rosalie brought the two little ones along to go pay the bill.

The moment she got to the counter, she met two individuals who were coming in head-on.

Wendy and Andrea were holding each other's arms intimately and had walked toward the restaurant while engaged in joyous conversation.

Rosalie could not help herself from slowing down. She looked around the surrounding environment, wanting to blend into the crowd to avoid them. These two always seemed to be against her, after all.

Wendy had been nursing her anger at her for a long time and did not even hesitate to unite the many medicinal materials suppliers in Coast City to boycott her research institute. Although Andrea just did not respect her medical knowledge, she had mocked her again and again. Looking at these two together, however, it was very obvious that they had a good relationship. Rosalie had no doubt that Andrea would stand together with Wendy. If it were any other usual situation, Rosalie might walk directly in front of them and pretend they did not exist.

However, she had the boys with her and did not want to get into an argument with them in front of her children.

She Has Some Consequences To Face Just as she was about to take the boys around, Andrea's strange-sounding voice came from the distance.

“Oh, Dr. Jacobs. What a coincidence. Were you also dining here?” Rosalie frowned slightly, not wanting to pay attention to them. The boys thought their mommy had not heard her and pulled her sleeve. “Mommy, someone called you.” Rosalie could only then stop to turn around and meet Andrea’s eyes calmly. “Truly, it’s such a coincidence. But I’ve already finished eating, so I won’t disturb you. I’ll be leaving first.”

After saying that, she planned to take the boys past them to the checkout counter. Wendy frowned and asked Andrea, “You two know each other?”

Andrea nodded. She glanced at the three of them who were just about to come up to them and said dismissively, “Don’t say it like that. I’m so out of Dr. Jacobs’ league with how impressive her medical skills are. So many people were powerless about my grandfather’s condition, yet it took Dr. Jacobs only a few needles before my grandfather woke up. Dr. Jacobs is now a guest of honor in my brother’s eyes. Her status is much higher than mine.” Hearing this, Wendy’s expression changed. “What did you say? Why did you invite her to treat Old Man Quirke?” Andrea sneered, “We weren’t the ones who invited her. She was the one who came to our house. As for the reason, I think it’s likely because she set her eyes on our family’s medicinal material supply. After all, my brother signed the contract with them after my grandfather just woke up.”

With that, she glared at Rosalie unhappily. “She didn’t even take a second to think about things and immediately agreed the moment my brother brought it up. Now, the contract has been signed. If anything were to happen to my grandfather in the future, she’ll have to bear the consequences!”

Chapter 66 I’m Not Close To You Andrea’s words made Wendy’s eyes shroud with uncertainty.

After getting rejected by Byron previously, in addition to the sudden news of this woman’s return, Wendy dared not wait any longer. During this time, she had been trying every means to share Byron’s last name. Early this morning, Wendy intentionally invited Byron’s parents for a meal hoping to impress them while thinking that Byron would listen to his folks and change his mind. The whole situation backfired while she bent over backward trying to please the little brat. Nevertheless, Byron’s folks were there, so she had to swallow all that rage with a smile. At the end of the day, Wendy decided to go out shopping with Andrea in hopes to calm down her anger. She did not expect to hear such news. Many famous doctors could not make any breakthrough with Old Man Quirke’s condition, but he was cured by Rosalie. Moreover, this woman had signed a contract with Andrius in advance to obtain a supply of medicinal materials for her research institute at half price!

'I did everything to get Coast City's medicinal material suppliers to boycott Rosalie's research institute. Has it all been for nothing?'

Wendy's inner thoughts were reflected in her cold eyes as she asked Andrea, "Didn't I arrange for a medical team to treat Grandpa Quirke? Didn't that suffice? Why let her take over his medical treatment?"

Wendy's eyes shot daggers at the woman inches away from her as her anger continued to simmer in the pit of her stomach. 'All that effort was spent, but this woman still managed to find a supplier in Coast City! Worst of all, this woman probably thought I was a joke and laughed at me behind my back!'

Andrea was stunned for a moment, then she hesitantly said, "...It's not that the medical team you arranged for didn't suffice. This woman approached my brother herself. She managed to persuade my brother by improving Grandpa's condition under her treatment. My brother has called the shots. She'll be responsible for Grandpa's follow-up treatment."

At this point, it is useless for Wendy to say anything more. Her heart writhed in disdain, but her face was polite, "I didn't know that you were so capable, Miss Jacobs. Even a professional medical team can't compare to you alone." Rosalie glanced at the screen of her mobile phone and replied indifferently, "There are many things that you don't know. Now that you know I've signed a contract with the Quirke family, what other tricks do you want to play?" Wendy's face sank abruptly, yet her tone was very innocent. "What do you mean? You cured Grandpa Quirke and I can't thank you enough. How could I play tricks on you?" Rosalie could not bother to play pretend with her and said bluntly, "I think deep inside your heart, you know clearly what I mean. Besides, even if you have more tricks up your sleeves, I really don't care."

I'm Not Close To You

Hearing this, Wendy lowered her face and did not answer immediately.

Andrea saw the two of them throwing daggers at each other and cautiously interjected, "Wendy, do you... know each other?" Wendy sneered, no longer concealing her hostility toward Rosalie. "More than that, I'd say our fate is intertwined," Wendy turned to look at Rosalie with all intention to provoke. "Wouldn't you agree, Miss Jacobs?"

Rosalie heard this sentence as soon as she paid her bill. She raised her eyes and glanced at the two people in front of her. She responded, "I disagree, Miss Fuller. I'm not close to you. Please don't say such words again, Miss Fuller. This will make me feel greatly troubled and uncomfortable."

Wendy's expression froze at the sting of Rosalie's rejection, her eyes now full of anger.

TIT

“It’s getting late. The two of you should hurry in and have dinner. Have fun, ladies,” Rosalie nodded simply, then walked past them right out of the restaurant with her two little boys in tow.

Chapter 67 How Could That Woman Compare To Mommy? The two women watched Rosalie’s figure disappear through the door, then they went into the restaurant and sat by the window. “Wendy, what’s the matter between you and Dr. Jacobs? I assume you both know each other but you’re not on good terms?” Andrea asked cautiously as she looked at the person opposite her.

Wendy gritted her teeth angrily. “How could we be on good terms? Rosalie is Byron’s ex–wife!

If it were not for Rosalie, her marriage with Byron would have been a done deal long ago!

Hearing this, Andrea was completely shocked. “That person... is Byron’s ex–wife?”

Byron was married six years ago, which was hardly a secret in the circle, especially when they grew up with Byron. However, everyone had always thought that Wendy would be Byron’s future wife.

Out of the blue, Byron suddenly got married. This heroine of Byron’s life never appeared in front of them, and he rarely spoke of her. So much so that no one knew who the woman was until they divorced. Nobody would have expected Byron’s ex–wife to be such a person...

Andrea’s mind was filled with the night Byron met Rosalie, At that time, she simply felt Byron’s behavior was very strange as he had treated her so harshly. She felt targeted for no reason, and he even asked her to apologize to Rosalie. It turned out that there was a reasonable backstory to his behavior.

Thinking of this, Andrea sighed in hindsight. “No wonder. That explains why Byron was so protective of her that day.” Wendy picked up these words immediately and asked coldly, “What are you talking about? Byron protected her? What’s going on?” Andrea thought of what happened that night, and her face was full of displeasure. She complained to Wendy immediately, “It was the night that woman came offering to treat Grandpa. I just asked a few questions for some verification. After all, she looks so young. Who knows if she has real skills? As a result, Byron and Estie demanded I apologize to her!”

Upon hearing this, Wendy's heart sank utterly. She was on guard against all odds because she was afraid that Byron would meet Rosalie. For this reason, she had tried every means to make Byron change his mind and go through with their marriage. Alas, the two of them had already met without her knowledge. Even Estie knew that woman and stood up for her! Moreover, despite Byron's stern and deep character, he still defended this woman, which meant that he was not disgusted with Rosalie Jacobs!

Wendy couldn't help but feel flustered with all these thoughts. Six years ago, Rosalie appeared out of nowhere and snatched Byron from her. No. This time, she would never allow Rosalie to disrupt her plans again!

How Could That Woman Compare To Mommy?:

Out of the restaurant, Rosalie took the two little boys directly into the car and drove all the way home. Lucian and Nox were still thinking about how Mommy was targeted just now. Although the words of the two ladies sounded fine, they had felt their hostility toward Mommy. Besides, Mommy seemed to be angry too. The two little boys looked at each other, both feeling a little annoyed. "Mommy, who were those two just now?" Lucian asked Rosalie with a sullen expression on his small face. "One is the family member of Mommy's patient and the other is probably... Estie's mother." As soon as those words left her mouth, Rosalie felt a strange feeling in her heart.

The two little guys pouted in disgust.

– It turned out that was the woman Daddy abandoned Mommy for. She was the reason why he did not want all of them anymore. How could that woman compare to Mommy?

When Wendy arrived at the company, almost the entire company's system was paralyzed. A group of staff stood by with puzzled expressions. The employees of the technical department were working on repairs and urgently salvaging the damage. Nobody knows where the virus came from. No matter their method, there is no way to rectify the damage.

When Wendy Fuller appeared, the staff next to her lowered their heads in unison, as if they were covering up something. The staff of the technical department had a grim look on their faces.

“What’s the matter? Why do you take so long to solve the issue? What is the point of having you incompetent fools here?” Wendy Fuller strode to the computer. Her face turned blue when she saw the picture on the screen. On the computer screen, there were two cartoon stick figures fighting. To be precise, one of them was bashing the other. The first stick figure being attacked had Wendy Fuller’s name written on the face with the words “Bad Woman” written on the front of the clothes. Next to the second stick figure who beat the first stick figure is a speech bubble with the words “Bash The Bad Woman!” Obviously, she was targeted by the person behind this virus attack!

Chapter 69 Who Dared To Humiliate Her? Wendy raised her eyes and glanced around, only to see the exact stick figure fighting on all computer screens within sight.

Ironically, such a comical scene made Wendy tremble in anger. Now that she had already seen what was on the computer screens, the employees were holding their breaths and walking on eggshells around her. Someone curiously wanted to see the president’s reaction but met her furious gaze and quickly retracted their eyes. Wendy’s laser eyes swept across the faces of the employees one by one. She gritted her teeth and pointed at a few people, telling Carl to immediately fire them. She then turned back and pointed at the employees of the technical department and cursed. “What on earth are you all even doing? How could the company’s system be hacked so easily? Besides, it’s been so long and you still can’t solve this crap? I spent so much money hiring all of you, just for you to be such an embarrassment to the company! Sort this out now, or get out of here!”

The employees knew Wendy’s temper was horrible, and they were prepared to be scolded by her. Her demeaning words made them feel victimized, but nobody dared to speak out.

The head of the technical department bit the bullet and explained, “President Fuller, this virus is really powerful. It was written by top hackers, so we... still need a little time to crack it.”

Wendy glared back furiously. “Give me a solution as soon as possible! Otherwise, you can pack your things and go with them!”

The head of the department quickly nodded in response, urging the employees of the technical department to speed up their actions. Everyone felt miserable.

Wendy's face was ashen as she looked at the two cartoon stick figures on the screen. She clenched her fists quietly.

'How dare you humiliate me like that?! If I find out who did this, I'll make them regret they were born!

Early in the morning, Rosalie was about to send the two little boys to school when she saw Nox come out of the room clutching his stomach in his little arms. "What's wrong?" Rosalie stepped forward to check worriedly.

Nox covered his stomach, his face wrinkled. "Mommy, my stomach hurts. Can I not go to kindergarten today?" Just then, Lucian also walked out of the room. He raised his puppy eyes and said to Rosalie, "Mommy, my stomach is also feeling a little uncomfortable." Rosalie got worried and frowned slightly. "It could be that you both had too much to eat for dinner last night. Go and rest now, two of you. I'll give your teacher a call." The twins nodded. As soon as Mommy turned around, a sly look flashed across their eyes.

Who Dared To Humiliate Her?

Rosalie had no doubts about her two little boys. After all, the twins had always been sensible, and they had never shown any resistance to going to school. Naturally, they would not pretend to be sick in order not to go to kindergarten. After the call, Rosalie poured warm water for the boys and got them some medication for indigestion. The two little boys took the medication and finished the glass of water obediently.

Rosalie wanted to go to the research institute, but because the twins were unwell, she chose to work from home. After helping the twins settle down, Rosalie got up and entered the study. Upon hearing the door of the study closing, the two little boys changed their weak demeanor and gathered together in high spirits. Nox was holding a laptop in his arms. When he saw that his virus had still not been cracked, he gleefully rolled his eyes at the expense of the flustered Wendy Fuller. "That bad woman must already be in the company at this time!" Lucian glanced at the time and said confidently. Nox hummed triumphantly, "Then she must have seen the little animation I made. She's probably so mad at this moment!" The two little boys felt relieved at the thought of the bad woman flipping with rage.

Chapter 70 Bully Mommy And Pay A Price “Bully Mommy and you must pay a price!” Lucian snorted coldly. Nox nodded vigorously, his fingers tapping on the keyboard again.

Seeing this, Lucian was a little puzzled. “What are you doing?”

Nox excitedly said, “Their technicians are just rubbish. My virus is so simple, yet it hasn’t been cracked. If that’s the case, then I’ll give it to them again. I’ll give them some extra challenge just to piss the bad woman off!”

Lucian nodded in agreement. “It’s better if they can’t solve it so that more people will see her as a joke. Let’s see if she still dares to bully our mommy!” The two little boys threw themselves into fits of laughter around the computer.

Suddenly, there was the sound of footsteps at the door. Lucian’s keen ears heard movement outside their room and quickly hushed Nox. Nox finished coding in a hurry and shoved the laptop into his brother’s arms. When Rosalie entered the door, what she saw was Lucian holding the laptop in his arms and Nox lying on the side watching his brother curiously. “I thought your stomach hurt? You should have a good rest. Why are you still on the laptop?” Rosalie frowned slightly. She sat down beside the twins. “Come here. Let me check your pulse again.”

The twins froze for a while upon hearing this.

Mommy was a very skilled doctor. If she checked them, it would reveal the twins’ secret!
By

then, they definitely could not hide what they had done from Mommy!

Rosalie reached out to grab Nox’s wrist, but Nox dodged his mother. “What’s wrong?” Rosalie looked at him puzzled. Nox cradled his wrist protectively, suddenly not knowing how to react. He looked at Lucian for help.

Lucian appeared calmer and extended his arm to Rosalie. “Mommy, I feel better after the medicine you gave us, but if you’re still worried, you can check if you like.”

Rosalie’s attention was temporarily drawn to Lucian as she placed her fingertips onto the pulse points of his wrist. After confirming that there was nothing wrong, she looked at Nox again. She remembered that Nox’s symptoms were slightly more serious just now.

Taking a cue from his brother's reaction, Nox also leaped into action. He leaned in front of their mother and beamed widely, "Mommy, I feel much better too! The medicine you gave us worked so well. Mommy, you're the most powerful doctor in the world! Brother and I adore you so much! We love you the most."

Rosalie chuckled and shook her head amusingly. After checking, she found that the two little boys seemed alright. While she was relieved, she felt that something was wrong.

Chapter 70 Bully Mommy And Pay A Price

"It's still a little uncomfortable, though," Nox said solemnly.

In response, Rosalie's heart tightened as she looked at him worriedly. Just then, she heard the little boy's affectionate voice. "It'll be better with Mommy's hugs." Then, a soft, tiny body rushed toward her. She smiled and welcomed the little boy into her arms. The doubts in her heart disappeared. She cuddled the little boy and they looked at the computer screen together. "Lucian, what were you doing?" While Nox got their mother's attention, Lucian had already switched the web page. He looked up at Mommy's eyes as if nothing had happened. "I'm looking at the trend of the stock market today, I made some money in the projects I invested abroad before." "My brother made a profit. More than 50 million!" Nox seemed even prouder than Lucian – himself.

Rosalie could not help but feel surprised. "That much profit? Lucian, you did so well!" Nox asked coquettishly, "What about me?" Rosalie smiled and said, "Your computer skills are also very good. You both are awesome. I love you both so much!" After that, she smiled and kissed their foreheads. The two little boys grinned innocently.
