

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 625

On the other hand, Byron wanted to pick up Estie after work but received a call from Andrius asking him to have dinner.

Byron wanted to refuse, but then he reconsidered. These two days, the topics they talked about were basically related to Rosalie.

Maybe tonight would be no exception.

Thinking of this, he agreed in a deep voice.

Byron hung up the phone and ordered Luther to pick up and send the little one home, while he drove to the appointment.

When he got there, Andrius was already waiting in his seat.

Andrius waved to his buddy when he arrived, indicating where he was sitting.

Byron strode over.

“How did it go? I hope you didn’t quarrel with Dr. Jacobs at noon today.”

Andrius’ concerned voice sounded as soon as he sat down.

Hearing this, Byron could not help but think of the woman’s repeated refusals during lunch. His face sank slightly.

Seeing his expression, Andrius was taken aback. “Not very good?”

Byron frowned, “The process wasn’t very pleasant, but I’m not sure about the result.”

If the woman really did not care about him, she would not have reacted that way to the waitress’ last words when they were leaving.

Byron vaguely felt that he might still have hope as he remembered her expression at that time.

Andrius was full of surprise. It seemed that his buddy was quite satisfied with how their interactions turned out.

What the heck happened at noon?

“Why do you say so?” Andrius could not help but ask.

Byron raised his eyes and glanced at him. He briefly recounted what happened at noon.

Andrius was even more surprised to learn that his buddy confessed so suddenly after Dr. Jacobs refused his flowers.

What was even more surprising was Rosalie's reaction to question his sincerity after hearing the confession instead of firmly rejecting him as before.

Even if he did not witness their afternoon conversation, Andrius felt that his buddy got game. He also felt that he had made great progress in pursuing women.

Andrius sighed after Byron finished speaking. "That's good. I was so worried that you'd get into another quarrel with Dr. Jacobs again. I even prepared a peace offering for you to make it up to Dr. Jacobs just in case things went south."

After they hung up earlier in the morning, Andrius made preparations to remedy the situation and was ready to help his buddy.

However, since this was the case, the things he prepared were not useless either.

"There's still hope for Dr. Jacobs. At such a time, you gotta act quick and not give her a chance to hesitate!" Andrius encouraged Byron to keep going.

Hearing this, Byron frowned slightly and said solemnly, "I'm also considering what to do next."

As soon as he finished speaking, he saw the person on the opposite mysteriously pull something out of his pocket.

He looked at him incredulously.

"It just so happened that I got two concert tickets this morning."

Andrius handed over the tickets. "Concerts are fun. Going to a concert together can also boost your relationship."

Byron's brows raised slightly at the two VIP tickets in front of him, and a smile appeared on his face. "Thank you."

Andrius smiled lightly and secretly concealed his effort. "I can only give you ideas. As for how to persuade Dr. Jacobs to go with you, it's up to you to find a way."

Byron had not considered this yet.

Hearing this, he pondered for a moment, then acknowledged in a grunt.

