

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 636

"If you don't mind, can we join you?"

Stacy slowly looked away from Rosalie and turned towards everyone with a smile.

Everyone looked at each other as they heard this, they had finished talking about business anyway, and this person was very familiar with Xander, so it was really difficult for them to refuse.

Thinking of this, everyone nodded to Xander, indicating that they did not mind.

Seeing this, Xander had no choice but to oblige. "Alright, then let's mingle together."

After speaking, he ordered the waiter to add tables and chairs.

Stacy walked straight to the seat near Xander that was vacated just now, looked at Rosalie in surprise, as if she had just discovered her existence, then looked back at Xander in confusion. "Is this young lady also with you?"

Xander nodded matter-of-factly, "This is Dr. Jacobs." Rosalie was unaware of what Stacy was thinking, she just thought she was just like those doctors questioning her ability. Rosalie smiled, got up and greeted her. "Hi, just call me Dr. Jacobs."

Stacy looked at her up and down, saw Rosalie's outstanding appearance, and realized she was in the same field with Xander. Also, it seemed that Xander was friendly towards this woman too.

Animosity built within Stacy's heart as she thought about this. She then spoke to Rosalie indifferently. "Wow, Dr. Jacobs, you must be really amazing to have cooperated with so many bigwigs in the medical field at such a young age."

Rosalie bit her lower lip and smiled modestly, "oh, I'm just lucky to have an opportunity."

A waiter came to add chairs, but not sure whether it was intentional or unintentional, Stacy stood between Rosalie and Xander's seats.

Rosalie did not think too much, got up and moved the chair to make room for Stacy.

Stacy lips curled into a small smirk and took the seat next to Xander's nonchalantly, she raised her eyes and looked at Xander, who was still entertaining, with admiration in her eyes.

On the other side, Xander was still toasting with the doctors, and did not notice the undercurrent surging at his seat.

"Xander has excelled in many areas since he was a child, but due to the Lancer family customs, Xander rarely has contact with girls. Except me of course, we have grown up together since we were kids."

Stacy said casually, without indicating who she was speaking to.

But by her side, only Rosalie could hear what she said clearly.

Rosalie was puzzled, but out of politeness, she responded with a smile. "Then Ms. Stacy and Young Master Xander must have a good relationship."

Stacy was puzzled and turned to look at Rosalie.

Rosalie just smiled lightly, her face full of sincerity.

Seeing her appearance, Stacy frowned, and continued to test the waters. "How did you and Xander know each other?"

Rosalie replied calmly. "I was recommended by old Master Quirke during the last free clinic, and I was fortunate to give the children a free clinic together with Young Master Xander."

Hearing this, Stacy's heart sank again.

The Hudson family has also dabbled in the medical field, but her medical skills were still not on par, so she has no chance to have a free clinic with Xander.

However, Stacy was very clear about the Lancer family free clinic process.

Hearing Rosalie say this, she also thought of how close the two were during the free clinic.

"Oh really? It seems that Dr. Jacobs' ability is stronger than I thought to be able to have a free clinic with Xander. He must appreciate you very much." Stacy praised incredulously.

Rosalie vaguely sensed something strange about her statement, and for a while, did not know how to respond to her.

The way Stacy set the tone, no matter how she answered her, it would appear that her relationship with Xander was ambiguous.
