

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 656

Rosalie calmed down for a few seconds before replying to the message.

Rosalie: [What do you mean? I already promised the child about the concert.]

The reply was immediate.

Byron: [I just thought that maybe you'd be busy with the Lancer family for a while. So if you really don't have time, I don't want to force you.]

Seeing the last sentence, Rosalie had a vague guess in her heart.

Perhaps Byron suddenly brought up this matter because of what she told him in the car, asking him to stop forcing her.

To him, Rosalie only agreed to go to the concert because Estie had repeatedly requested it. That meant she had no choice but to agree, which was considered forced.

'So, is he making up for previous mistakes?'

The thought that this man would actually make a change because of her words gave Rosalie many odd feelings. She almost believed what Byron said about pursuing her.

Realizing her train of thought, Rosalie snapped back to her senses, lowered her eyes to collect her thoughts, and tapped the screen a few times with her fingertips.

On the other hand, Byron's eyes gradually darkened after he did not receive her reply for a long time.

After they spoke in the car that night, he chatted with Andrius again when he came back. He knew the way to pursue this woman.

Due to Rosalie's words, he also reflected on what he had done during this period.

The only way to redeem himself was the concert invitation.

When the little one invited Rosalie in the morning, she was obviously reluctant.

It was only because of Estie's tears that she reluctantly agreed.

Byron did not give her a chance to refuse.

Now, since the woman said that she needed time to think about it, he did not want to push her anymore.

'I've already made concessions. Why didn't she reply?'

Just when he hesitated to ask, the phone vibrated suddenly.

Byron frowned slightly and looked down.

It was a reply from Rosalie.

Rosalie: [In terms of being busy, how can I compare to you, President Lawrence? I've already promised Estie to go to the concert together. I won't break my promise to her, so I'll be there on time.]

Byron frowned as he read the text. Then, the corners of his lips gradually drew a pleasant arc.

Byron: [Alright then. See you this weekend.]

He had already made concessions, but the woman still decided to go to the concert.

Whether it was because of Estie or not, for him, it was an unexpected joy.

On the other hand, after Rosalie replied to the message, she put the phone aside and ignored his reply after.

She chose to go to the concert indeed because she had promised Estie.

However, she also knew that if she replied that way, Byron might take it the wrong way.

She had just told him in the evening that he should not force her and give her some time to think about it.

Now the man voluntarily made a concession, but she went against her own words.

Anyone else would feel that she was both welcoming and refusing.

Even Rosalie found her behavior ironic.

However, this was something she had already promised Estie.

Rosalie really did not want to see the little one with tears in her eyes anymore.

She just hoped that Byron could make concessions today and that on the day of the concert, he could be a little more restrained and keep a distance from her...

Thinking about what might happen at the concert, Rosalie tossed and turned all night, wondering if she had made the wrong decision several times. However, there was no room for regret now.

