

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 954

After the little ones fell asleep, Rosalie turned off the small night light in the tent.

The tent was dark, and Rosalie did not know whether the man on the other side had fallen asleep.

However, Rosalie did not hear anything for a while, so Byron must have fallen asleep.

With this in mind, Rosalie gently got up, walked out of the tent, and sat alone in the moonlight.

The weather was great. The moon was bright, and the stars were sparkling.

Byron had turned on his car's headlights, and they shone the surrounding for safety purposes.

Rosalie's mind drifted as she looked at the landscape around her.

So much had happened today.

First, the little ones suddenly got infected with bacteria, and then she inexplicably ended up sharing a tent with Byron.

Either way, Rosalie could not calm down.

Just as her mind wandered, there was a noise behind her.

Startled, Rosalie instinctively glanced back. She felt tense and was ready to defend herself.

When she saw the man behind her, she gradually calmed down.

'What are you thinking about out here when it's already so late?'

Byron walked out of the tent and frowned as he looked at the woman before him.

Rosalie was not asleep, and neither was he.

He thought Rosalie would be back soon when he suddenly heard noises from the other side of the tent.

Unexpectedly, he heard no more movement after waiting for a while.

Byron was worried, so he walked out to check on Rosalie.

However, he did not expect to see Rosalie sitting under the moonlight in a daze when he was out.

Rosalie was stunned for a few seconds.

She came out of the tent to stay away from Byron.

She had no idea what to answer Byron when he asked her that.

Rosalie could not be frank and tell him she was avoiding him because she could not fall asleep with him in the tent.

As she hesitated about how to answer, Byron sat down beside her.

Rosalie's body stiffened, and she forced herself to relax.

"I wonder where the bacteria in the kids' cups came from."

After a while, she casually gave a reasonable answer.

That was one of the things that bothered her.

Byron lifted his eyebrow and looked serious. "It might be accidentally contaminated by some plants. There are a lot of bacteria in the wild."

Rosalie shook her head, denying Byron's guess. "No. I know that bacteria. That's not a common bacteria. It's produced in a lab and used there. You can't find it in the wild."

Byron's face turned gloomy. "You mean..."

Rosalie was certain. "Someone did this intentionally! otherwise, the bacteria wouldn't have been in the wind and their cups."

She was only trying to rationalize why she was outside the tent. However, when she talked about the bacteria, she became unavoidably serious.

"That bacteria can cause symptoms that an adult can't cope with, let alone two children. If you hadn't delivered the medicine in time, I don't know how long Nox and Estie would've been able to take it..."

Rosalie's eyes flashed with anger as she thought of the pain.

She could not figure out who had done this to the kids.

Byron finally understood what had happened, and he was angry too.

"If that's the case, Lawrence Corporation will investigate and find out who's behind this."
