You're Out Daddy

Chapter 6

When Thea returned to the car, Kenneth was scrolling through his phone. He glanced at her. "Have you found it?"

"Yeah, I dropped it on the way here." She took out a pen and waved it in front of him.

Kenneth replied nonchalantly, "It's just a pen. If you lose it, just forget it."

"It's a birthday present from you two years ago! It's very meaningful to me, so I can't bear to lose it." With that, Thea put it away carefully.

Kenneth continued scrolling through the documents on his phone. Thea glanced at him and remarked, "Sally looks quite pretty. She's quite charismatic too."

He was stunned for a while. Without raising his head, he replied calmly, "Sure."

"She's your type, right?" asked Thea. She pretended to be asking it casually, but it was actually a careful test.

Kenneth looked at her, his gaze unfathomable. "What are you trying to say?"

Thea smiled. "Nothing. I just think that she's pretty."

"There are a lot of pretty girls out there, but it's rare to find one with an interesting soul," he replied.

"But even her beauty is rare," said Thea. In fact, she was even jealous of how pretty that woman was.

Kenneth continued looking at his phone quietly.

Even though Thea had been with him for so long, she still could not read his mind. She averted her gaze and looked at the driver. "Start the car."

Kenneth suddenly woke up in the middle of his dream.

In his dream, Natasha and two children were covered in blood. They waved as they moved further and further away from him...

When Kenneth sat up, his forehead was already covered in sweat.

He got out of bed and walked to the floor-to-ceiling windows. The bright moon hung amongst the clouds, while stars dotted the night sky. He lit a cigarette.

Even though six years had passed, the incident still bugged him.

After he had divorced Natasha then, the housekeeper found an ultrasound image that showed that she was pregnant. By the time he returned to his senses, she had already disappeared from his life. To be exact, he could not locate her whereabouts at all. It was like she had disappeared into thin air.

He picked up his phone in frustration and called his assistant. "Investigate a woman named Sally from Prosper Technologies," he instructed.

"Right now?" The assistant had just woken up from his sleep and was still groggy.

Kenneth fell silent for a while. "Forget it. Never mind." He hung up the call after that.

He knew that his dream had something to do with the woman he saw earlier in the day.

However, he was certain that she was not the same woman.

He did not regret the marriage. He merely felt bad for the two children.

If he had found out earlier, the marriage might not have ended so quickly. At the very least, he would not let her take the children away.

After finishing a cigarette, Kenneth returned to his room and got back to bed.

Some things were bound to leave regrets.

Prosper Technologies had been waiting for Hamilton Corporation's response.

However, they had not received any updates after so long. Unable to bear with it anymore, Xavier looked for Mark.

"Xavier, I know that this project is extremely important to you, but we can't control Hamilton Corporation's decision," said Mark. When he did not receive any responses, he already understood what that meant.

"Mark, is there a problem with our proposal? What is it? I want to know!" demanded Xavier.

Mark sighed. "I heard that your proposal is one of the better ones, but Thea vetoed it. They didn't say why."

Xavier narrowed his eyes. "It's got something to do with Natasha?"

Mark did not know what to say. He merely wanted Natasha to learn from the meeting, but he did not expect Thea to target her. Hence, he could not say for sure whether Natasha had something to do with it.

"Xavier, only Hamilton Corporation will know. Since they didn't update us, I can't possibly ask Mr. Hamilton directly, right?"

"I know!" With that, Xavier turned around and left.

Mark sighed helplessly as he stared at Xavier's retreating figure.

Everyone in the Programming Department knew that Xavier was in a bad mood, but none of them knew how to console him.

They began talking about it during their break.

"We can't blame Xavier for being in a bad mood. If the project had gotten through, his little sister could be cured."

"What illness does his sister have?"

"I'm not sure, but I heard that it requires a lot of money. Mark said that if his proposal got accepted, he would give Xavier the bonus in advance. Looks like the plan got foiled!"

"No wonder he seems so hostile recently."

Someone sighed.

When Natasha heard what her colleagues said, she frowned.

At that moment, someone entered. "Xavier went to Hamilton Corporation!"

Everyone stood up in shock. "What? Is he out of his mind? He can't afford to mess with Hamilton Corporation!"

"Mark wants two staff members to bring him back."

Thomas and Ross, who were part of the same team, immediately ran out.

Meanwhile, Natasha sat there motionlessly.

At Hamilton Corporation, Kenneth was having a meeting in the conference room when he heard a commotion outside.

Thea glanced at the rest before rose to her feet and left to deal with it.

When she saw Xavier demanding to meet Kenneth, she walked over to him. "What's going on?"

The secretary explained helplessly, "He insists on meeting Mr. Hamilton."

Thea glanced at him. "You're the programmer from Prosper Technologies?"

"Yes!" replied Xavier.

"What's the matter?" asked Thea coldly.

"I want to know what your decision is about the project," he replied.

Thea scrutinized him disdainfully. "Is this how the staff of Prosper Technologies behaves? I thought that the message was clear without needing to say anything. Since you insist on knowing, let me give it to you straight. We've decided to go ahead with Elexus' plan."

"Why?" demanded Xavier.

"It's our company's decision. Why is there a need to explain?"

"I know how capable Elexus is. They can't even compare to our company! In fact, they've been accused of plagiarism in the past. How can it be beneficial for your company?"

Thea laughed. "Please check yourself, sir. Don't defame them just because of your failure. That will just reveal your flawed character." She could not be bothered to waste any more time with him. "Get him out!" With that, she turned around and left.

Xavier refused to leave. "Although I can't claim that our proposal is the best, it definitely suits your company the most! This is unfair!"

Thea did not even turn around.

At that moment, the meeting ended. Kenneth walked out. When he saw the commotion, he did not even spare them a single glance.

However, Xavier rushed to him desperately. "Mr. Hamilton, I'm from Prosper Technologies. I need a chance. I need justice!"

Seeing how Kenneth had no intention of entertaining him, Xavier panicked. "Is it because of Natasha? Are you going to let all our efforts go to waste just because of a woman? Is this what a major company should be doing?"

Kenneth stopped in his tracks and glanced at Xavier.

What did he say?
